

Beloved Earth Community

A Checklist for Self-Selection

These yes or no questions are designed to quickly help you identify if our approach and invitation to form a community could be a good fit for you. This is not an entry criteria – all are welcome to participate.

If you are mostly answering in agreement then we encourage you to take the next step and get in touch. If you mostly disagree, it's possible that it's not the best fit, however we invite you to have a chat with us in case a supporting conversation would be helpful to confirm that or perhaps reach a fresh perspective.

- Do you find yourself regularly overworked, over-tired and under-resourced - and bowing under the weight of all these burdens?
- Do you sense the need to make a radical change to how you live but you lack the resources (financial, health, knowledge or otherwise) to do so?
- Do you have a sense of the inherent fragility of our existing economic system and of the institutions that support our health and wellbeing?
- Are you disillusioned by the dominant culture of consumerism and materialism, and actively seeking more meaningful alternatives?
- Are you concerned and distressed about ecological degradation, species extinction, and the unravelling of our ecosystems, and looking for ways of living more lightly on the planet?
- Do you see signs of impending societal collapse, and wish to take decisive action to heal social fragmentation and adopt a more holistic lifestyle?
- Have you feared for your future given these collapsing systems (and parents: for the future of your children)?
- Do you have a longing to live in community but difficult experiences in relationship with others leaves you feeling ambivalent about moving in this direction?
- Do you find that the more you try to manage certain areas of life, the more impossible it seems to create order and a sense of equilibrium?
- Do you wish to take an active role in forming an intentional community?
- Do you have needs that you feel might prevent you from living in an intentional community without being reassured of the understanding, support and compassion of others around you?
- Do you already have spiritual practices in your life and/or are curious about how spiritual principles can be applied to help us navigate these uncertain times?
